The development of computational methods and numerical techniques, make it possible to design geotechnical problems more efficiently, safely and economically.